Hong Kong: protest, politics and identity

Colloque

Hong Kong, the “pearl of the Orient” and long considered as a quintessential commercial city, has seen serious political protests since summer 2019. The whole world has witnessed the images broadcast in the media and international press. Numerous signs inside and outside China show that this immense country and its relations with the world are entering a new period of great uncertainty. In this historic moment, what is happening in Hong Kong, the symbolic city of modern China, delivers certain messages for the future of Hong Kong and China.

What factors are at the origin of these protest movements? What will be the impact in the formation of a new Hong Kong identity? What can be expected from the political evolution in Hong Kong and the relations between the city and the continent and the outside world? This symposium, organized by Professor Lun Zhang, attempts to clarify these issues.

Several important Hong Kong academics and intellectuals, both actors and privileged observers of these protests and the political and cultural evolution of these last few decades to Hong Kong will be present to show their analysis. They will also dialogue with French Hong Kong specialists.

“Creative State-Making“: Surprising Trajectories in Islam, Gender & Politics in Southeast Asia

Nurul Mohd Razif

Inspired by an emerging anthropological focus on the bureaucratization of Islam in Southeast Asia, this workshop aims to explore how states adopt policies that engender surprising consequences on the ground, and the dynamic ways in which non-state actors too engage in processes of “creative state-making” (Müller 2018).

Why social movements matter?

Social Movements in the Global Age, Geoffrey Pleyers

Laurence Cox presents his recent book Why Social Movements Matter, written at the Collège d'études mondiales.

The 21st century sees social movements written large on the map of the world, while journalists, intellectuals, novelists, celebrities and politicians invoke specific movements as current events or for dramatic effect. Yet the significance of widespread popular mobilisation as such is barely a subject of public reflection.

Why should the wider public care about social movements in general, and how can they grasp them?

Friday 10/25 | 4pm - 6pm | FMSH A3-50

Heritage Factory in the Digital Age

6th Hyperheritage International Symposium

Chair Unesco ITEN, Ghislaine Azémard

The term HyperHeritage covers every hybrid cultural heritage environment augmented with digital information inviting us to explore new ways of perceiving, experiencing and practicing cultural heritage. Massive developments on ICT and the unprecedented spread of mobile, location-aware and immersive technologies and devices, advocate for the exploration of new forms of Human to Human, Human-Computer and Human-Environment interaction and information communication on Cultural Heritage. These advances also imply gradually establishing new ways and means to comprehend, access, process, experience and perceive digital and interconnected Cultural Heritage information on a variety of delivery platforms, devices and environments.

International Panel on Exiting Violence Final report presentation

IPEV, Violence and Exiting violence Platform, Jean-Pierre Dozon, Yvon Le Bot et Michel Wiewiorka

The International Panel on Exiting Violence (IPEV) presents its final report for the first time in Paris. The results of its nine working groups, the fruit of two years of international and interdisciplinary collaborations, aim at thinking the exit of violence, at the various levels where it is exercised (deradicalisation, disengagement, reconciliation, memories of groups and individuals, etc.). With a constant concern to articulate a critical approach to practical recommendations, this report is intended not only for the academic world, but also for the political world and the actors of civil society. During the presentation, key panelists will speak before a general discussion with the audience.

Monday 11/18 | 5pm - 8pm | IEA de Paris

“Migration crisis”? What crisis?

Chair Exile and migration, Alexis Nuselovici (NOUSS)

This workshop, co-organised by Alexis Nuselovici (NOUSS) and Nina Sahraoui, aims at examining the notion of “crisis” within the field of migration through an interdisciplinary dialogue bringing together philosophers, linguists, geographers, sociologists and anthropologists. Through a common etymology, “crisis” and “criticism” share a same semantical value, that of an opportunity offered to new understandings and changes. In contrast, the current discursive use of “crisis” seems to stress historical ineluctability and political inflexibility. How to explain this reversal?

Tuesday 11/29 | 9:30am - 6pm | FMSH BS1-28

The Chinese political model

Chinese Modernity, Identity and model, Lun Zhang

What is the Chinese political model? The political factor is the key to grasp the factors of permanent change of this gigantic country in all domains, as has been seen in previous seminars. The speakers will try to analyze certain major events that have taken place in the last few decades, events whose impact has been a determining factor in the political path of contemporary China.

Making of the Southwest Indian Littoral

Carmel Christy Kattithara Joseph

The Southwest Indian littoral occupies a prominent role in the history of trade and colonisation. The strategical location of the ports such as Cochin, Mormugao and Thoothukudi in the Southwestern shores made them flourishing centres of trade for merchants as well as the Portuguese, the Dutch and the British colonisers. This workshop aims to explore the mediations in the form of trade, colonialism and religion in the southwest littoral over the last three centuries.

About

The Fondation Maison des sciences de l'homme (FMSH) is a institution that supports the development, influence and appeal of humanities and social sciences at a national and international scale. It creates excellent conditions for research and interdisciplinary dialogue, for nurturing scientific networks, and for cultivating fruitful encounters between the public and private sectors. Recognized as a public interest institution, the FMSH contributes to the renewal of research by developing its actions and services according to four priorities: cutting-edge research, international collaborations, innovative dissemination of knowledge and digital infrastructures.

This programme presents the events organized by the FMSH Research department. Structured around the Collège d'études mondiales, scientific platforms, chairs, innovative programmes and partnership projects, the Research department supports projects, studies and networks that take an interdisciplinary overview approach to major present-day challenges.
