Global '68

Solidarity in alliance and global history

1968 was a year of offensives, uprisings, and demonstrations against capitalism and imperialism, for liberation and emancipation and the war in Vietnam was its epicenter. The events claimed many victories for democracy, equality, and emancipation, but also provoked deep, abiding repression.

A counterfeit history has subsequently erased police violence and the deaths of participants, removed workers, women, students, and indigenous peoples from the picture, and eliminated anti-Americanism, anti-imperialism, anti-capitalism, as well as the profound influences of the wars and interventions in Algeria, Latin America and Vietnam.

“Global ‘68” will retrieve the aspirations, energies, memories and histories of this worldwide movement and offers hope to a new generation of activists.

“Global ‘68” is a linked set of conferences, organized by Françoise Vergès, Marcus Rediker, Oscar Guardiola-Rivera, and Sylvie Robic, sponsored by the Collège d'études mondiales (FMSH), the University of Pittsburgh, Birkbeck (University of London), and the University Paris Nanterre, to be held in Paris May 2-4 and London May 5-6, 2018.

Events will focus on the movements and major shifts in politico-cultural sensibilities around the world that made 1968 such an extraordinary year. Three notions are central to this approach: solidarity in alliances, global history, and history from below.

With Angela Davis, Tariq Ali, Peter Linebaugh, Kristin Ross, Lewis Gordon, Silvia Federici, Achille Mbembe, Vijay Prashad, Ronald Judy and more than 30 renown researchers and artists.

Chair Global South(s)

Françoise Vergès

This research chair considers the study of the Global South(s) as spaces and temporalities created by globalisation.

In May, the chair co-organized the conferences “Global ‘68” on the movements and major shifts in politico-cultural sensibilities around the world that made 1968 such an extraordinary year.

Speakers: Angela Davis,
Tariq Ali, Peter Linebaugh,

Kristin Ross, Lewis Gordon, Silvia Federici, Achille Mbembe, Vijay Prashad, Ronald Judy and more than 30 renown researchers and artists.

In June, a panel discussion on new feminisms will gather Nancy Fraser and Françoise Vergès.

Chair

Exile and migrations

Alexis Nuselovici (Nous)

This chair, situated at the cross-roads of sociology, philosophy and cultural studies, is charged with undertaking fresh analyses of migratory phenomena in order to improve our understanding of the realities of migration.

Two panel discussions are organised: La haine des migrants with Virginie Guiraudon (CNRS) and Olivier Douville (director of clinical psychology); Leonard Cohen, l'exil au cœur with Chantal Ringuet, co-director of Les révolutions de Leonard Cohen, (Presses de l'Université du Québec, 2016).

The chair also organize the Réunion des États généraux des migrations.

Alexis Nuselovici (Nous) will participate as well to the debate Du droit d'entrée au droit à l'exil about the two distinct visions of migrants rights, with Catherine Wihtol de Wenden.

Seminar Accumulations and accelerations

Christopher Pollmann

The Olympic motto – “Faster, higher, stronger”– is not confined to the sporting arena. Imperious calls for acceleration and growth govern our entire lives, sometimes to the point of addiction. But massification and speed are not easily compatible with democratic deliberation and calm application of the rule of law.

Wednesday 06/07 / 5-8pm / FMSH-BS1-05 & BS1-28

Seminar

Sociology of conflict

Hervé Le Bras, Michel Wieviorka

This seminar investigates the terminology and categories of the social sciences (such as people, race, laicism, crisis and social movement...), combining theoretical work with examination of practical problems. Nancy Fraser, professor of philosophy at New School for Social Research, New York, will speak during a exceptional session on May 23rd.

Every Wednesday until 06/06 / 11am-1pm / FMSH-A3-35
Except 04/18, 04/25 et 05/30

Seminar Has a Chinese model of development been existing?

Lun Zhang

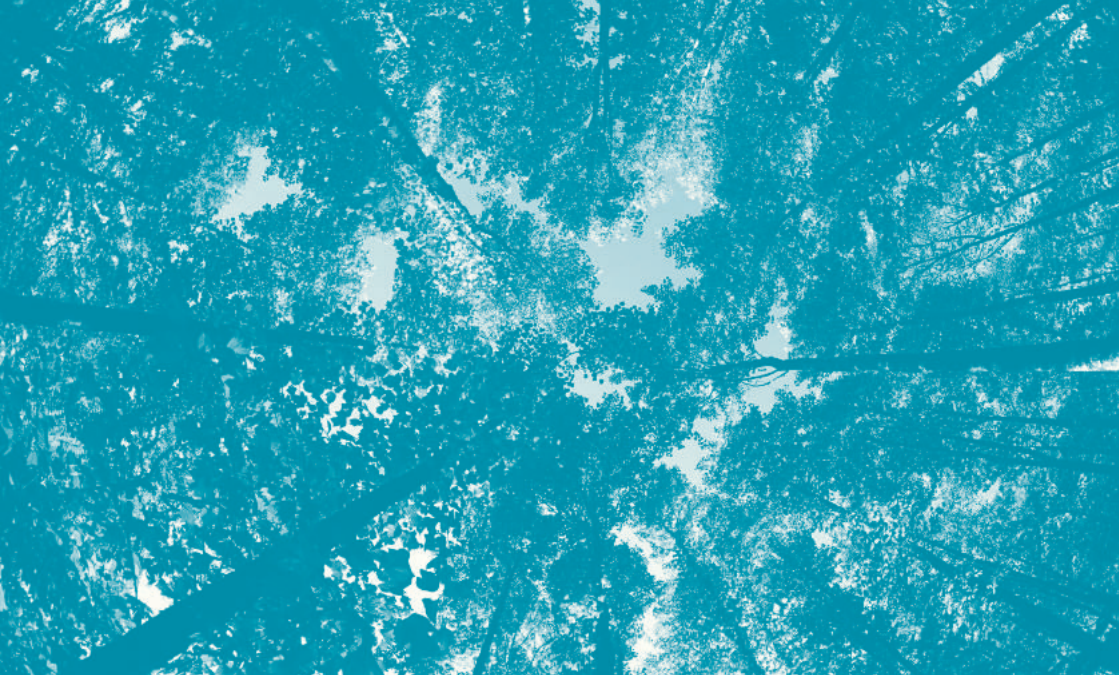

As 2018 marks the 40th anniversary of the Chinese reform, this seminar will deal with this question that has been polemical for a long time, in China and the rest of the world, among politics and specialists.

Tuesday 04/03 / 5-7pm / FMSH-B1-18

Tuesday 05/29 / 5-7pm / FMSH-B1-18

Tuesday 06/15 / 5-7pm / FMSH-B1-18

Initiative

Plural democracy and economy

Jean-Louis Laville

This research initiative studies the interweaving of the history of ideas and social practices, for a better understanding of contemporary theory and the choice of the social economy as model. It offers two seminars.

The seminar Socioeconomic of globalization and development: from social business to solidarity economy organized by Isabelle Guérin (IRD) and Jean-Louis Laville, offers a reading grid of the different projects and politics qualified as development and fight against poverty.

The seminar Rethink emancipation will welcome Michèle Riot-Sarcey and Richard Figuier on “Emancipation and utopia”; Christian Laval and Francis Sitel on “1968 and emancipation” and Gisèle Berkman, Claudia Moatti and Jean-Louis Fournel on “Emancipation and religion”.

Seminar

Global anthropology of religions

Erwan Dianteill

Conclusion of the seminar How do religions change? on transformations triggered by global situation and by the specific dynamics of religious movements.

During the last sessions, Serena Bindi (University of Paris Descartes) will focus on Hinduism, Zhe Ji (INALCO) on Chinese Buddhism and Pierre-Joseph Laurent (University of Louvain) on the religion of Cape Verdeans in the United States as an example of religious globalization.

This seminar will be concluded by a workshop that will gather all the speakers in order to constitute and international network in anthropology of religions.

Seminar For a non-hegemonic globalized sociology

Stéphane Dufoix

This seminar seeks to review the debates showing that sociology is torn apart ; it envisions both the current situation and the future of the discipline from the standpoint of a non-hegemonic globalized sociology. Danilo Martuccelli (Université de Paris Descartes) will speak about “Écritures et réécritures de la modernité” and Shalini Randeria (Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Genève) about “Locations and locutions: unravelling the concept of World Anthropology/ Sociology”.

The Collège d'études mondiales

In 2011, the Fondation Maison des sciences de l'homme created the Collège d'études mondiales to serve as a venue where projects led by international researchers are developed in a firmly pluridisciplinary framework.

The Collège d'études mondiales promotes new ways of thinking and working: the research efforts of the philosopher and the economist, of the doctor and the political scientist, of the literary scholar and the anthropologist, inform one another in their investigation of the changes that mark today's world.

Research activity is organized under three topic headings – “New norms and institutions”, “Rethinking the welfare state” and “Subjectivities: output and knowledge” – that aim to study these changes at the individual and systemic levels.

The Collège is organized around research chairs. Each chair is occupied by a prominent scholar (French or foreign) for a four-year term, with a team of associates and postdocs engaged in research, meeting invitations, seminars or lectures, and publication.

Certain research initiatives are also hosted in order to incubate research programmes on topics that are under-represented in France.

The Collège d'études mondiales benefits from the international mobility facilities and pluridisciplinary environment that are the hallmarks of the Fondation Maison des sciences de l'homme.
