Dear RC47 Members,

The IV ISA Forum is fast approaching. Unfortunately, it will not take place in Porto Alegre, but we are really looking forward to meeting all of you and having lively discussions online. In this issue of our Newsletter you will find some key information about the RC-47 participation in the IV ISA Forum of Sociology, including our highlights, practical information and the full program. RC-47 will host or co-host 30 sessions, including 6 joint sessions and 2 common sessions with other RCs. In total, 202 authors will participate in our program during six days (February 23-28, 2021) with 120 papers. Following our policy of encouraging the participation of students, precarious academics and researchers from the Global South, we awarded 13 Registration Grants for 50% discount or free registration to the ISA Forum. For the allocation of the grants, we considered geographic, gender, race and class inequalities. Most beneficiaries came from Latin America, Africa and Asia (9). Students and activist-scholars from the United States, Canada and Portugal received the other four. Nine identified themselves as 'she/her/hers' and four as 'he/him/his'.

You will also find in this newsletter a report on activities developed over the past two years (2019-2020), including events promoted or co-organized by RC47 (lectures series, conferences, webinars and seminars), publications (our editorial project Open Movements and books supported by RC47), among others initiatives. Our committee has been especially active since the beginning of the pandemic, thought-provoking the debate on social movements in this complex historical moment. An important sign of the RC47 has also been forging bridges between the Global North and the Global South. We invite everyone to carefully read this issue of the newsletter and to actively participate in our events. If you are not yet a member of RC47, join us!

Greetings,

Breno Bringel

DEMOCRACY, INEQUALITIES, INTERSECTIONALITY: A TRIBUTE TO MARIELLE FRANCO (Thursday, 25 February 2021, 17:45 - 20:00 (Brazilian time, GMT – 3))

(Common Session endorsed by RC 05 Racism, Nationalism, Indigeneity and Ethnicity, RC 25 Sociology of Language, RC 29 Deviance and Social Control, RC34 Sociology of Youth, RC47 Social Classes and Social Movements, RC48 Social Movements, Collective Actions and Social Change, RC53 Sociology of Childhood, RC56 Historical Sociology, ALAS & CLACSO)

Marielle Franco was a 38-year old Brazilian sociologist, a single mother, a defender of human rights and a local councillor of the city of Rio de Janeiro. She was murdered on March 14th 2018. Ever since, she has become a global symbol of a struggle against racist, colonial, hetero-patriarchal domination and police violence and for social justice, human rights and democracy. Her life as a black woman from the favelas shows that intersectionality is not only a theoretical concept. It is a daily life experience for millions of women living in slums all over the world, suffering from racism, patriarchal and economic discriminations. As a single-mother, black, homosexual and politically active woman that lived in a favela, she also shows how paths of personal and collective emancipation find their roots in daily life experience, communities, feminist conviction as well as in social policy and in the right to higher education. Her life also exemplifies the importance of opening careers of sociology beyond the middle and higher class. Sociology played indeed a major role in this path towards emancipation, as she attended classes in her favela and then graduated at the university. She kept acting as a sociologist, a social activist and a political actor until the end, as she was in charge of a report on military violence in Rio's favelas, which is the most probable reason of her assassination.

COLLECTIVE CONVERSATION: SHARING NEW RESEARCH ON SOCIAL MOVEMENTS, GLOBAL JUSTICE AND THE PANDEMIC

(GENERAL ASSEMBLY): (Friday, 26 February 2021, 09:00 - 10:30

(Brazilian time, GMT – 3)

This session has a special format: a collective conversation. All ISA Forum participants interested are invited. This is a joint initiative between RC-47 (Social Classes and Social Movements) and TG03 (Human Rights and Global Justice). Its main objective is to share new/ongoing research on social movements and global justice during the pandemic in an informal and convivial space, seeking to minimize the impacts of the absence of a face-to-face meeting. We expect to identify common research topics and agendas, gaps and possibilities for joint research and collaborations. In sum, this is a space for collective debate. Take a coffee with us and bring your latest book or publications to share with all of us.

ANOTHER WORLD IS (STILL) POSSIBLE: THE FUTURE OF GLOBAL MOVEMENTS AND THE PANDEMIC (Friday, 26 February 2021, 17:45 - 20:00 (Brazilian time, GMT – 3)

(Common Session endorsed by RC44 Labour Movements, RC47 Social Classes and Social Movements, and RC48 Social Movements, Collective Actions and Social Change)

In January 2001, the city of Porto Alegre hosted the first World Social Forum. The meeting was thought as a counterweight to the World Economic Forum and neoliberal globalization and it implemented the slogan of the Via Campesina: "Globalize the Struggle, Globalize the Hope". The Forum gathered four times in Porto Alegre (2001, 2002, 2003, 2005), the latest edition gathering over 170.000 people from 132 countries, with the slogan "Another world is possible". Now in times of pandemic, questions of mobilization for global justice, tolerance and deep democracy - as raised by the World Social Forum before - is probably more important than ever. This panel will discuss, if another world is still possible. What are the new challenges but also opportunities for building of a global movement in the 21st century since the pandemic?

AUTHOR MEETS CRITICS: Social Movements and Politics in a Global Pandemic, edited by Breno Bringel and Geoffrey Pleyers. Bristol: Bristol University Press, 2021 (Saturday, 27 February 2021, 10:45 - 12:15 (Brazilian time, GMT – 3))

The COVID-19 pandemic has deeply shaken societies and lives around the world. This book reveals how the pandemic intensifies socio-economic problems and inequalities across the world, whilst offering visions for a better future informed by social movements and public sociology. Bringing together experts from 27 countries, the authors explore the global echoes of the pandemic and the different responses adopted by governments, policy makers and activists. The new expressions of social action, and forms of solidarity and protest are discussed in detail, from the Black Lives Matters protests to the French Strike Movement and the Lebanese Uprising. This is a unique global commentary on the current crisis and the contemporary world. ISA Forum Plenary Sessions

In addition to the RC47 program, social movements and a sociology rooted in a dialogue with social movements will be at the core of most plenary and semi-plenary sessions of this Forum, organized by the former president of RC47 and current Board Member, Geoffrey Pleyers. We thank Geoffrey for all his efforts in organizing this fantastic Forum and invite RC47 members to also follow all plenary sessions, especially the Opening Plenary with Boaventura de Sousa Santos, Rita Segato, Ashish Kothari and Jean-Louis Laville as keynote speakers.

The opening session will be live streamed and widely accessible on the ISA website even for non-registered participants (a small fee will be required to attend the other 800 panels of the Forum: 20USD for students, 50 SD for researchers to have access to all the panels)

A Message from Geoffrey Pleyers, RC47 Board Member and ISA Forum President

This IV ISA Forum of Sociology will be our first virtual Forum, with over 800 sessions, more than 3,000 papers and the participation of sociologists from 125 countries. This Forum will be a unique opportunity to gather our research results and analyses of the extraordinary time we live and study, of its impact on individuals and societies and on four global challenges it has intensified: democracy, environment, inequalities and intersectionality.

During six days, hundreds of panels will explore the world in the pandemic and the world that may come out of it based on research grounded in the field and topics of the ISA Research Committees, Working and Thematic groups. Young researchers and experienced scholars from different regions of the world will expose their analyses of societies and sociology in the pandemic. Leading scholars from different continents will share their perspectives in the Forum's Opening and Closing Plenaries: Michael Burawoy, Isabel Casimiro, Manuel Castells, Ashish Kothari, Rita Segato, Boaventura de Sousa Santos and Jean Louis-Laville. This Forum will also be an opportunity for our global community to pay tribute to three of our most distinguished colleagues to which special panels are dedicated: Immanuel Wallerstein, Erik Olin Wright and Marielle Franco.

The pandemic has stressed how deeply interdependent we have become and accentuated the need of a more global sociology. Epistemologies of the South and intersectional perspectives on democracy, ecology and social justice are more than alternative options for sociology in the 21st century. There are at its core and have deeply transformed it. Opening more spaces for our colleagues from the Global South has been a central goal in this Forum. We are particularly pleased to host semi-plenary sessions set up by the Brazilian Sociological Society with the Porto Alegre Local Organizing Committee, by the Latin American Sociological Association and by the Latin American Council of Social Sciences, and that the president of the Council for the Development of Social Science Research in Africa will join us in the closing session.

IV ISA Forum of Sociology (II): practical information

Session Access

All sessions will be held online using Zoom. You will need access to the Internet and a computer (if presenting) or a tablet/mobile phone to join. Make sure to download the latest version of Zoom on your device before the conference. We recommend using headphones for sessions where you'll be speaking to improve audio and cut down on the chance of any feedback issues. Presenters and attendees will access the links to the Zoom meetings via the online program (coming soon). You will be required to login using your email address and registration ID number. You will receive an email message with your login information prior to the conference.

Roles & Expectations

All session participants (presenters, discussants, chairs, panellists) must log in to the Zoom meeting for their session 20 minutes early. There will be a technician waiting for you to assist with any issues or questions you may have. This will be your time to troubleshoot problems and practice screen sharing before the session begins. To view a summary of your roles in the meeting, click on "My Meeting Roles".

As a Presenter, you will:

- Present live, share your screen for the duration of your presentation (if you have presentation slides), and turn your camera on.
- If you are unable to present live, submit your pre-recorded presentation in advance to be played during the session by the session chair.
- Participate in discussion and respond to audience questions at the end of the session.

As a Chair, you will:

- Introduce each speaker before their presentation.
- Help guide discussion by calling on people to speak and monitoring the Zoom chat for questions to pose to the speakers live.
- Play pre-recorded presentations uploaded by presenters who are unable to present live (you will receive an email notification with instructions if any are uploaded for your session).
- Keep track of time, make sure the session does not exceed its scheduled end time.

Best Practices

- Mute your microphone when not speaking
- If you are permitted to turn on your webcam, please do so.
- Turn it off if you are having trouble with your Internet connection or you are asked to do so because others are having trouble.
- If you have not already uploaded a photo for your Zoom profile, please do. That way, if you have to turn off your web cam, people will still see an image of you.
- Avoid lighting from the side or behind you, this will cause your face to be shaded or blocked

Session Recordings

All sessions will be recorded and posted for viewing within one week after the conference. Recordings will be made available in the online program for registered attendees only, you will be required to log in using your email address and registration ID to access them. We are still trying to see if there is any possibility to live stream some of our sessions at the RC47 YouTube channel.

Time Zone

By default, all times will display in your local time zone (the time zone your computer or device is set to). You have the option to switch to viewing in the meeting time zone (BRT, GMT-3) by clicking on the time zone button at the top of the page. Please make sure that you are accessing the program with your login and local time in order to don't get confused with the time!

Zoom Technical Support and Tutorial

There will be technical support available in all Zoom meetings during the conference. Look for the participant named ConfexTech Support and contact them using the chat feature if you need assistance. The tech will be responsible for starting and ending the Zoom meeting, assisting with technical problems and questions during the session, and assigning Zoom Co-host privileges to the session Chairs. For further information on how to access sessions and manage the program you can watch the tutorial below:

Movements, Intersectionality, and Politics of Liberation in the Global North and South

This panel calls for an intersectional analysis of mobilization, looking at gender, class and migration under global capitalism. Intersectionality as a concept and analytical tool takes into account the nexus of several social categories that determine the position of both individuals and groups in the social structure. Marginalization of individuals and groups is linked not only to their social class but also to race, gender, age or citizenship status. Like all aspects of one's life, livelihood chances are determined not by the singular class axis but is enabled or circumscribed by other constituent identities. Thus, an intersectional framework beyond reductionist class analysis is important to map marginalities within movements often rendered invisible under the homogenized class category. This session intends to look into various forms of struggle for equality, aiming at transforming hierarchical social relations and reducing intersectional discrimination; politics of liberation, being weaved together by black, colonized and subaltern women, or unrecognized migrant workers; and multiple forms of critique as practice at multiple sites of the Global South and North. At the same time, it addresses contributions discussing intersectionality as practices of coalition-formation and relationship building among various (marginalized) groups as well as modes of resistance against intersectional discrimination and exploitation.

Digital Activism in Post-2008 Protest Movements

From popular protests to the resurgence of the women's movement in recent years, new identities have been communicated via posts and memes, and new platform-centred organization practices have even experimented. What is the character of these digital activist practices and how do they reflect the dilemmas of our digital present. This panel invites abstracts on the evolution of digital activism in the new protest movements of the post-2008 era. It is interested in digital practices of various recent movements, looking both at the emergence of new forms of resistance against the alt-right and the mobilisation of new demands on issues such as climate change, poverty, women's rights and many others. If back in 2011 at the time of the Occupy wave, digital activism still seemed like a novelty, by this day it has become one of the most familiar ways in which activists communicate and organise. Memes, political Facebook pages, and Twitter storms are key tactics used by activists to express their demands, represent social problems and mobilise their base.

¿Qué Fue de la Primavera Indignada? Movimientos Juveniles y Resistencias Globales (2010-2020)

Las trayectorias y subjetividades de las juventudes del siglo XXI son marcadas por su diversidad y por sus diferentes posibilidades de expresión identitaria. El contexto neoliberal, la crisis del capitalismo y las reconfiguraciones en los modos de producción del mundo del trabajo tienen repercusión impactante para las realidades juveniles. Esta sesión recibirá trabajos que realizan discusiones teóricas y metodológicas sobre/con las juventudes contemporáneas, a partir sus formas de participación y resistencia, e investigaciones empíricas que buscan ampliar la comprensión de estos fenómenos en la actualidad.

The City and the Weapons of the Weak: Everyday Forms of Resistance Against the Marketization of Space

Inequality has been globally on the rise for several decades. At the urban scale, the increasing marketization of space strengthened social and economic division, exclusion, displacement and forced mobility, further deepening inequality in turn. The global crisis, and afterwards the rebound of real estate and tourism, accelerated this process in many countries, intensifying dynamics of gentrification and touristification. Usually considered as a Northern problem, gentrification is now spreading throughout the globe and in the Global South, multiplying housing crises, with their corollary of degradation of life condition of those citizens who, already in an extremely weak condition, would instead need more protection. In this regard, it is significant that several southern cities, including Luanda, Rio de Janeiro, Santiago de Chile, rank among the world's most expensive in terms of housing, with monthly rents averaging the equivalent of yearly GDP per head. However, all these dynamics have not been passively suffered by citizens, who opposed them in many ways: from open struggles to different forms of everyday resistance that, often hidden, have actually shown their effectiveness in rebalancing the original inequality of power in the city's appropriation. These 'weapons of the weak' are the object of this panel, which welcomes proposals addressing the fight for the right to the city, with specific interest in collecting experiences from understudied countries, such as Black Africa, and focusing on open and organized struggles as well on 'hidden' forms of resistance.

Social Movements and Protests Against Neoliberal Politics in the Global South

In many parts of the global South, the 2008 global financial crisis provided an acceleration of ongoing contentious politics. Yet discussions of the so-called post-2010 'global' protest wave have largely excluded the experiences of the south or sought to analyze the experiences of the south in comparative perspective. Nearly a decade after the self-immolation of Tunisian street vendor Mohamed Bouazizi, an event on African soil, that provided the impetus for protests that would inspire the 'Arab Spring' and beyond many other protests against neoliberal capitalism, it is time to reflect on the nature of collective action in disruptive times. This panel seeks contributions that consider transnational networks and resistances against neoliberal politics in the global South. It seeks to answer: How are politics against neoliberalism embedded in social movement practice and politics? To what extent are social movements drawing on repertoires of past collective action, global waves of resistances or developing new ones? How do activists in the global South adopt, reject or reinterpret transnational waves of resistances? How do they affect local activism? Therefore, we want to address the connections, disconnections and interrelations of collective actions, their genealogy, their transnational interlinkages and local adaptations or ambiguity between neoliberal politics and collective action.

From “Alternative Spaces” to Counterpower: Promoting Post Capitalist Livelihoods through Prefigurative Politics

How do social movements promote prefigurative political projects that balance the realization of post capitalist livelihoods, while at the same time engaging with previously existing economic, cultural and institutional structures? This panel invites presentations which illustrate processes by which prefigurative political projects become counterpower through the “co-production” of networks of trust and collaboration across different social groups and institutional environments, leading to the diffusion of “socio-ethical and counter-cultural practices” experimented with, enacted and coordinated within “alternative spaces”.

A New Sociological Paradigm for XXI Century Social Movements and Conflicts (Joint Session with RC48)

The classic sociological paradigm involves including the tension between analyses that privilege structure and analyses that privilege action. Its principle components are Durkheim's structuralism, Weber's rational action and Pareto's elitism and the struggle between elites. XX Century Social movements studies were connected to this classical paradigm to analyze both working class movements and new social movements. The post-modernist theory and the post-colonial studies as well the post-western studies suggest themselves as new analytical patterns opposing classical sociological paradigm focused essentially on explaining the structure of the nation state in Europe in the industrial era. These theories really represent new paradigmatic models to explain today global society? Do postmodern, post-colonial or post-western analyses can explain the social and cultural meanings of social movements like Arab Springs, Occupy Wall Street or Umbrella Movement? We invite to propose theoretical and empirical studies on the issue.

Precarity, Subjectivity and Collective Actions

Flexibilization, fragmentation and digitalization are the main drivers of the world of work with non-unique impacts. Contemporary age offers new opportunities for the individuals in relation to their working experiences, considering the increasing importance given to autonomy, cooperation, knowledge and creativity in the working life. On the other side, there are many challenges due to the commodification and exploitation of humans and environmental life. At global level, logic of market seems to impose itself on the individual's dignity and rights as worker and citizen, leading to a crisis of democracy and of the subjective affirmation. In this scenario, there are many paths of self-affirmation and many forms of collective actions, in order to deal with the processes of fragmentation, flexibility, inequality and precariousness of the daily life and of the social contexts. What are the processes of subjectivation and desubjectivation in relation to the working experiences in the contemporary age? What are the workers' collective actions to cope with these processes and how the individuals are involved? This panel will gather empirical and theoretical contributions, encouraging a multidisciplinary approach to the debate. Main attention will be given on the issues of workers' dignity, class formation, the networks of collective actions, the meaning of the workers movements in relation to the wide social movements, the comparative analysis.

Social Movements As Protagonists of New Agrifood Markets Part I

(Joint Session with RC40)

Social movements have become protagonists in the restructuring of the agrifood system. This is not only due to the criticism they build of the oligopolization and financialization of food markets. Increasingly, the social movement's repertoires of action also include the construction of new organizational structures and institutional devices, from which they seek to disseminate political and moral principles that question the idea of food as a pure commodity or financial asset. This process of political construction of markets reveals that, rather than an impersonal and abstract structure that operates with a universally preconceived logic, they are concrete social arenas where the visible hands of different actors compete to organize relations and economic practices according to their interests and values. This session proposes a dialogue of approaches from the sociology of agriculture, social movement theories, public policies analysis, and economic sociology, with the aim of understanding how different social movements – from the traditional agrarian movements to the new food consumption collectives – are building social and political engagement to support civic food markets. The session is interested in discussing conceptual approaches such as alternative food networks, food movements, food democracy, food citizenship, prosumers and prosumerism, and other concepts used to describe such politicization of food production, marketing and consumption. It also invites works that critically debate this issues taking into account dynamics of inclusion and exclusion in terms of class, race, gender, citizenship, that is, the emancipatory possibilities of such social movements.

Mobilization of Rights: Uses and Legal Strategies of Collective Actors and Social Movements

In this session, organized with the support of the Institute for Rights and Social Movements - IPDMS, Brazil - we want to promote the debate on the perspectives of mobilization of rights and legal strategies by social movements. More specifically, we want to discuss how collective actors mobilize rights, use legal strategies, advocacy, and strategic litigation in order to foster their demands, to politicize social question or to influence the shaping of public policies. Proposals regarding concrete experiences and theoretical reflections on different types of social movements (such as popular, feminist, environmental, LGBT and queer, black, or urban/rural movements are especially welcome). At the same time, we also would like to open space for proposals which deal with the oppressive aspect of the law, it means, which analyses forms of criminalization and control of social movements, e.g., labeling them as “terrorist groups”, or also forms of legal persecution against activists which support migrants and other social movements. Both theoretical works and empirical research are welcome.

Far-Right Alter-Activism? The Development of (New) Far Rights Around the World

(Chair: Antonio Alvarez-Benavides)

At the beginning of the 2010's decade, a series of new social movements arose around the world. With different objectives and in different contexts, they all share the claim for more social justice, dignity and democracy. New formations and political parties, new ways of understanding and to make politics appear from the creativity, subjectivity and hope of these movements. Nevertheless, at the end of the decade the outlook is quite worrying. Far-right is leading the Government of USA, Brazil, Hungary, etc, and has grown and expanded all over America and Europe. The claims for social justice have been replaced by politics against diversity, sexual freedom and gender equality. Far-right is using some of the tools and strategies of the progressive social movements. They have even formed new social movements and parties that give aid for national people. They actively and creatively reclaim their specific rights (or privileged) at demonstrations, in cultural encounters, in the local, international and digital sphere, attracting more and more people. In this session we aim to answer the following questions: which are the reasons behind taking part of this kind of collective actions? Which kind of subjectivities are being developed in these movements? Which identities are susceptible to be attracted by the alt-right discourses? Which are the similarities of these alt-rights and the post-2010 progressive social movements and the political formation and transformations born from them?

Democracy, Inequalities, Intersectionality: A tribute to Marielle Franco (Common Session with RC05, RC25, RC29, RC34, RC48, RC53, RC56, ALAS & CLACSO)

Marielle Franco was a 38-year old Brazilian sociologist, a single mother, a defender of human rights and a local councillor of the city of Rio de Janeiro. She was murdered on March 14th 2018. Ever since, she has become a global symbol of a struggle against racist, colonial, hetero-patriarchal domination and police violence and for social justice, human rights and democracy. Her life as a black woman from the favelas shows that intersectionality is not only a theoretical concept. It is a daily life experience for millions of women living in slums all over the world, suffering from racism, patriarchal and economic discriminations. As a single-mother, black, homosexual and politically active woman that lived in a favela, she also shows how paths of personal and collective emancipation find their roots in daily life experience, communities, feminist conviction as well as in social policy and in the right to higher education. Her life also exemplifies the importance of opening careers of sociology beyond the middle and higher class. Sociology played indeed a major role in this path towards emancipation, as she attended classes in her favela and then graduated at the university. She kept acting as a sociologist, a social activist and a political actor until the end, as she was in charge of a report on military violence in Rio's favelas, which is the most probable reason of her assassination.

Social Movements and Solidarity Economy: New Confluences in Research and Action

And if practices were ahead of theories? Indeed, in the field there are multiple links between social movements and solidarity economy, but dialogues between specialists in both areas remains too rare. This mutual ignorance is no longer sustainable. Like the social actors, researchers in social and solidarity economy have a lot to learn from those who dedicate themselves to social movements studies and vice versa. The separation between these two areas of study is due to an historical Western-centrism installed in social sciences. It is possible to emancipate from it by a sociology of emergences and by an epistemology of the south. A first step to go in this direction is to revisit the conceptions of solidarity, economy and movement. Rethinking these categories also highlights the importance of institutionalization processes whose complexity has to be studied beyond the simplifying schemes through which they have often been interpreted. Therefore, this panel seeks to explore new hybridizations encouraging a creative research program involving case studies from different continents as well as theoretical proposals.

Women on the Move: New Activisms in the Contemporary Feminist Wave

The feminist movements became increasingly present in the last decade around the world, through different slogans such as the #NiUnaMenos hashtag in Latin America, the #MeToo denouncing abuses in the film industry in North America, and also its french version called #BalanceTonPorc. In 2018 a feminist student movement in Chile also emerged in the universities, and the Argentinean “pañuelazos” were also present in the struggle for a safe and free abortion. This is how in March 8th 2019, massive strikes took place across the globe claiming for rights and the end of the patriarchy. Taking into consideration this broad context, this panel discusses new forms of activism present in contemporary feminist mobilizations, their global character and their relationship with preceding women's movements.

Religions, Social Movements and Politics Circulation, Production and Politics of Knowledge in the “Christianisms of Liberation” and Its Adversaries (Joint Session with RC22)

Since the structuring of the sociology of religions, various networks of researchers and organizations have been set up to enrich and develop research on the religious in contemporary societies. In this panel, we will welcome contributions devoted to the genealogy and topicality of the articulation of knowledge productions and the constitution of scientific networks related to religion, with a particular interest for the actors of liberation theologies in the South and North of the planet, in a historical perspective (from the middle of the 20th century) as well as in contemporaneous actors. In this context, we will receive contributions analyzing the impacts of both reactionary and progressive religious networks on social movements, political campaigns and parties in the second half of the 20th century and during the 2010's.

At the intersection of the sociology of science, the sociology of networks and globalization, and the sociology of religions, we will also look at trajectories, collaborations and networks of actors (including researchers), in order to understand how these linkages are places of decision and power. Particular attention will be paid to 1) the concepts and authors used by these scholars and networks; 2) the links between religious institutions, political parties and the production of knowledge in the social sciences of religions. The organizers will publish a thematic issue of Social Compass, International journal in Sociology of Religion, open to the papers presented in this panel.

Another World Is (still) Possible: the Future of Global Movements and the Pandemic (Common Session with RC44 and RC48)

In January 2001, the city of Porto Alegre hosted the first World Social Forum. The meeting was thought as a counterweight to the World Economic Forum and neoliberal globalization and it implemented the slogan of the Via Campesina: "Globalize the Struggle, Globalize the Hope". The Forum gathered four times in Porto Alegre (2001, 2002, 2003, 2005), the latest edition gathering over 170.000 people from 132 countries, with the slogan "Another world is possible". Now in times of pandemic, questions of mobilization for global justice, tolerance and deep democracy - as raised by the World Social Forum before - is probably more important than ever. This panel will discuss, if another world is still possible. What are the new challenges but also opportunities for building of a global movement in the 21st century since the pandemic?

Alter-Activists in the Contemporary World: Rethinking Autonomy and Institutionalization

Many movements around the world reveal some aspects of an alter-activist culture. Their perception of social change is based on participation, the multiplicity of “other possible worlds”, the horizontality of social relationships and the defense of diversity. It is through these modalities that actors question the issues that concern the social order, designing alternatives for possible futures at the same time. Over the past two decades, from Spain to Brazil, from Istanbul to Moscow, from Quebec to Japan, a global wave of protest movements has occupied public spaces to demand more democracy and participation. Alter-activist movements share a critical view of institutions as they exist. What are their strategies to avoid centralization or internal prioritization? What forms of decision-making and internal organization are possible to bypass the much criticized institutional verticalization? This panel would focus on the relationship between movements, actors and institutions. If movement, on the one hand, far from institutions risk isolation, on the other hand, those who come closer to them are faced with the risk of reproducing their structural logics. A total rejection of institutions is part of a prefigurative and daily activism exploring alternatives to global capitalism. It is the feelings of rejection of institutions that make individuals act and provoke the desire for an alternative life. Contemporary protest movements that are reconfiguring themselves through an institutional rupture and the reappropriation of institutions are to be explored, considering that the two modalities of action are both mixed within an alter-activist culture.

Social Movements, Contentious Politics, and the Imagination of Alternative Futures. Part II (Joint Session with RC07 and RC48)

The ISA Research Committees RC07, RC47 & RC48 are co-hosting two Sessions on social movements, contentious politics, and the imagination of alternative futures. The recent rise of retrotopian politics and authoritarian leadership across world regions (Bolsonaro, Duterte, Erdoğan, Orban, Trump, among others) has uncovered a widespread disenchantment with narrowly conceived liberal democracy. This lends heightened urgency to better understand the radical imagination and creative efforts of social movements to overcome the confines of the social and institutional status quo. The aim of this session is to bring theoretical approaches, empirical case-studies, and historical comparisons of different settings and regions, South and North, into a fruitful dialogue. Abstractly formulated, the questions may include (but are not limited to): How do social movements invent, articulate, and engage with alternative visions of the future? Why do the horizons of imaginable futures expand or shrink at certain times and places? How do visions relate to social interests, identities, ideologies, solidarities, repertoires, values, and innovative agency? What led to the current political polarization, and how does it impact political alternatives and the prospects for a better world? How do social movements appropriate or invent media for disseminating and deliberating about their visions? How do assumptions about the achievability of desirable futures shape contentious politics and influence the outcomes of social movement struggles? What are the appropriate methods to engage with these visions and their dynamics? And what upcoming tasks should be high on the research agenda?

Learning from the Brics Countries: Social Movement Theories and Cross-Cultural Comparison

This panel present empirical research on protest and social movements in BRICS countries (Brazil, Russia, India, China, South Africa) and, more general, in the Global South, as well as state responses to them. The main goal is to highlight if (and how) these processes can contribute to a renovation of the conceptual apparatus of Western social movements studies. We especially welcome papers that discuss cases from more than one BRICS country, and those that feature a productive engagement with existing approaches to cross-cultural comparison, such as Philip McMichael's notion of 'incorporated comparison', Gillian Hart's 'relational comparison', the multi-sited ethnography developed by Michael Burawoy and others, or the comparative cultural sociology of critique fleshed out by Laurent Thévenot, Michèle Lamont and others.

Author Meets Critics: Social Movements and Politics in a Global Pandemic, Edited By Breno Bringel and Geoffrey Pleyers. Bristol: Bristol University Press, 2021

(Joint Session with RC56)

The COVID-19 pandemic has deeply shaken societies and lives around the world. This book reveals how the pandemic intensifies socio-economic problems and inequalities across the world, whilst offering visions for a better future informed by social movements and public sociology. Bringing together experts from 27 countries, the authors explore the global echoes of the pandemic and the different responses adopted by governments, policy makers and activists. The new expressions of social action, and forms of solidarity and protest are discussed in detail, from the Black Lives Matters protests to the French Strike Movement and the Lebanese Uprising. This is a unique global commentary on the current crisis and the contemporary world. Social Movements, Contentious Politics, and the Imagination of Alternative Futures. Part I (Joint Session with RC07 and RC48)

The ISA Research Committees RC07, RC47 & RC48 are co-hosting two Sessions on social movements, contentious politics, and the imagination of alternative futures. The recent rise of retrotopian politics and authoritarian leadership across world regions (Bolsonaro, Duterte, Erdoğan, Orban, Trump, among others) has uncovered a widespread disenchantment with narrowly conceived liberal democracy. This lends heightened urgency to better understand the radical imagination and creative efforts of social movements to overcome the confines of the social and institutional status quo. The aim of this session is to bring theoretical approaches, empirical case-studies, and historical comparisons of different settings and regions, South and North, into a fruitful dialogue. Abstractly formulated, the questions may include (but are not limited to): How do social movements invent, articulate, and engage with alternative visions of the future? Understanding the Criminalization of Struggles for Rights in Comparative Perspective (Joint Session with RC12)

The criminalization of struggles for rights –or simply political dissent- is increasingly becoming a powerful tool used by governments in so-called democracies to restrict civil and political rights and legitimize use of State violence against rights defenders, under the cover of anti-terrorists or war on drugs operations. There are common elements in these situations where States criminalize throughout new laws and measures that render illegal democratic behaviors such as public demonstrations, and by using discourses that target activists –sometimes with morality-based accusations- and thus expose them to further violence. Yet, criminalization also implies specific forms of violence and intimidation imposed to women who are targeted by “systematic practices of sexual violence as a means to deter protest” (IHRC, 2017). Young people, Indigenous and Afro-descendants –among others- are also criminalized in specific ways that deepen structural violence. In response, criminalized groups respond by dynamic and diversified resistances: in Latin America for example, many Indigenous and Afro-descendant rights defenders recur to judicial contestations, protest, artistic performances but also form large alliances with other sectors of society in order to overcome criminalization practices by exposing their contradictions to democracy. In doing so, these alliances choose to fight over the meaning of democracy itself and propose new innovative meanings and practices that expose authoritarian elements of current democracies and challenge them. This panel aims at constructing a comparative analysis of both the impacts of criminalization as a global phenomenon and the resistance strategies of current struggles for rights against criminalization over the world.

I. EVENTS

Our RC47 2019-2020 events can be split between before and after the pandemic. In 2019 we co-organized 2 conferences in Portugal and Chile and a series of lectures in Germany. After the start of the pandemic, RC-47 was quite active organizing or co-hosting online webinars. Altogether, we had 5 international online events, divided into 15 autonomous sessions. An International Conference scheduled for October 2020 in Dakar (Senegal) was postponed to November 2021 due to the pandemic. Please find the details below.

(I.1) ISA RC47 and Einstein Forum Lectures (Potsdam, Germany, from October 2019 to February 2020)

The Einstein Forum in Potsdam (Germany) is a small foundation that brings together original thinkers from all over the world to test new with a general audience. Between October 2019 and February 2020 the ISA RC-47 co-organized with the Einstein Forum a series of lectures in Potsdam under the heading “Solidarity in Danger.” Organized by Mischa Gabowitsch. Four members of the RC-47 participated in the program:

Thursday, 30 January, 2020

Simin Fadaee (University of Manchester): Social Movements in the Global South: Challenges and Prospects, Chair: Sabrina Zajak, Bochum

Tuesday, 11 February, 2020

Breno Bringel (State University of Rio de Janeiro): Brazil under the Bolsonaro Era: Authoritarian Neoliberalism and Right-Wing Movements, Chair: Renata Motta, Berlin

(I.2) Conference Bridging Social Movement Studies: Forms of Participation and their Study Between North and South - Tribute to Britta Baumgarten (Lisbon, Portugal, October 7, 2019)

Britta left us early in 2018. She shared research, projects, ideas, beers and dreams with many RC47 members, activists, and social movement scholars from around the world. On October 7, 2019, the Instituto Universitário de Lisboa (ISCTE-IUL), where Britta worked, hosted this meeting in her honour. RC-47 supported the conference. The topics discussed included new paths in European Social Movement Studies, dialogues between social movement scholars and activists, social movements and new forms of participation across the South and the North. Speakers include Nina Amelung, Ruben Diez Garcia, Guya Accornero, Roberto Falanga, Ana Lucia Sá, Maria Fernandes-Jesus, Ana Margarida Esteves, Breno Bringel and Portuguese activists. Conference organized by our colleague Guya Accornero.

- Further info here

- A special issue on the topic, edited by Guya Accornero and Breno Bringel, will be published in the journal Partecipazione e Conflitto, 14(3), 2021.

(1.7) Webinar The Sociology of Belarusian Protest (20 August 2020)

Belarusian voices are few and far between in debates about the recent protests in Belarus. In this webinar, Belarusian sociologists shared their views and analysis of the current protest wave. Among other things, they discussed the role of striking workers; class, gender, and violence; the mobilizing effects of trauma; the impact of urban space; the legacy of previous protests; the role of protest in forging different types of communities; and the ways in which the post-industrial shift and other long-term transformations in Belarusian society have affected its political economy.

Participants: Nelly Bekus, sociologist, University of Exeter (UK); Elena Gapova, sociologist, Western Michigan University, USA / European Humanities University (Vilnius, Lithuania); Aliaksei Lastouski, sociologist, Polotsk State University (Belarus); Alena Minchenia, gender scholar and social scientist, Lund University (Sweden); and Andrey Vozyanov, social anthropologist, European Humanities University (Vilnius, Lithuania) / Minsk Urban Platform. Moderator and organizer: Mischa Gabowitsch, sociologist and historian, Einstein Forum (Germany). Co-organized with the Einstein Forum (Potsdam, Germany), Ukraine in European Dialogue Program at IWM, Vienna (Chronicle from Belarus), Democracy Seminar (Public Seminar / Transregional Center for Democratic Studies, New School for Social Research, New York).

(1.8) International Online Seminar Social Movements and Social Change in a Global Pandemic (October-December 2020)

This international online seminar, coordinated by Geoffrey Pleyers and Breno Bringel, gathered scholars from different continents to analyse the way social movements and popular actors have faced the pandemic in a range of countries. Its main aim was to discuss a global perspective on the current crisis and the way actors may shape the societies that will emerge out of it.

Session 1: October 8, 2020 | A global sociology in times of COVID-19 (Breno Bringel & Geoffrey Pleyers)

Session 2: October 22, 2020 | Social movements in a global pandemic (Breno Bringel & Geoffrey Pleyers)

Session 3: November 5, 2020 | América Latina: Solidaridad y resistencias durante y más allá de la pandemia (Montserrat Sagot and Karla Henríquez Ojeda)

Session 4: November 26, 2020 | Anti-racism and struggle for social justice in the United States (Bandana Purkayastha and John Krinsky)

Session 5: December 3, 2020 | Resistances and democratic struggles in Lebanon and South Africa (Alexandra Kassir and Kate Alexander)

Session 6: December 17, 2020 | One year after the beginning of the pandemic, where do democracy and social movements stand? (Lesley Wood and Ashish Kothari)

(1.9) Point Sud & ISA RC47 Conference Struggles for ‘democracy’ in Africa - Encountering researchers and activists from the Global North and South (Dakar, Senegal – NEW DATES: 16-20 NOVEMBER 2021)

Social movement research is still predominantly concerned with protest and activism in the Global North. While scholars based in Latin America have pushed the research on Latin American social movements as well as theory building, protests in Africa and their relationship to the theoretical debates in social movement studies have only recently come into focus. The literature on African social movements largely focuses on the so called ‘Arab Spring’ while the ‘African Uprisings’ that took place since the mid 2000s all over the continent received less attention. The existing studies often focus on so called pro-democratic movements that mobilize for regime change or against presidential term amendments. Other movements such as anti-mining movements or protests against large-scale agro-industrial projects, labour movements or organizations mobilizing for women’s rights or the rights of the LGBTQI* community or recent mobilizations for environmental justice and against the climate crisis are still largely invisible in the social movement literature.

This conference therefore aims to first, bring together researchers from Africa and the Global North to gain a more nuanced picture of the existing empirical knowledge on social movements and protests in Africa and their link to democratization processes. Second, we intend to introduce theories and concepts from the Global South into international research on democratization and social movements. Third, we bring together activists and researchers in order to facilitate an open exchange on the relationship of the academic debate on social movements and the hands-on mobilization of protests.

This international conference was planned to take place in Dakar (Senegal) in October 2020. However, it had to be postponed due to the pandemic. It's expected that the conference will take place at the University Cheikh Anta Diop from November 16 to November 20 2021. The Conference is co-organized by Nina-Kathrin Wienkoop, Sabrina Zajak, Antje Daniel, Louisa Prause and Lamine Doumbia and is organized in cooperation with Point Sud – Centre de Recherche sur le savoir local. If you want further information, please contact Antje Daniel: antje.daniel@univie.ac.at

2. PUBLICATIONS

(2.1) Open Movements

The Open Movements editorial project was founded in 2015 in a partnership between RC47 and the independent global platform Open Democracy. Since then, almost 300 articles have been published by activists and academics from all regions of the world. Open Movements has become an important global platform for public sociology. Although most of our authors are social scientists, the public is much broader and reaches out also activists, journalists and policy-makers.

Since the last ISA World Congress of Sociology in Toronto, Canada, the dynamics of publications have been more episodic. Nevertheless, in the past two years we have published 53 articles, including a special week of articles dedicated to the pandemic and social movements, which have been widely disseminated. We also strengthened our collaboration with the Latin section of Open Democracy, Democracia Abierta, and we thank its editor, Francesc Badia, for the partnership.

The latest articles include:

Giuseppe Caruso, Carminda Mac Lorin and Teivo Teivainen, Foro Social Mundial: activismo global en tiempos de pandemia

Boaventura de Sousa Santos, Europe in 2021

Check all our articles here:

<https://www.opendemocracy.net/en/openmovements/>

(2.2) RC-47 Newsletter

We have published three issues of our Newsletter during the last two years, edited by Chris Chan, with this new format and design.

(2.3) Book - Alerta Global: políticas, movimientos sociales y futuros en disputa en tiempos de pandemia (Buenos Aires, 2020)

This book, edited by Breno Bringel and Geoffrey Pleyers, was published in Spanish in August 2020 by the Latin American Council of Social Sciences (CLACSO) and the Latin American Sociological Association (ALAS). The book featured the analysis of 48 authors from 28 countries, including several RC-47 members and leading sociologists and social movements scholars in the world. In its 434 pages there is a global perspective to the current crisis and the contemporary world, the way in which inequalities are exacerbated and forms of social control are diversified, but also about new forms of solidarity, social movements and paths to renew the critical thought and rethink “other possible worlds”.

- It is available for free download here (the book has been downloaded about 15,000 times)
- 1,000 printed copies are being sold in the main bookstores in Argentina and other Latin American countries.

(2.4) Book - Social Movements in a Global Pandemic (Bristol, 2021)

Revised and updated version of the book published in Spanish. It will be published soon by Bristol University Press (BUP) and Policy Press. All information can be found on the BUP page here. In addition to the printed version, there will also be a free E-book version.

Description: the COVID-19 pandemic has deeply shaken societies and lives around the world. This powerful book reveals how the pandemic intensifies socio-economic problems and inequalities across the world, whilst offering visions for a better future informed by social movements and public sociology. Bringing together experts from 27 countries, the authors explore the global echoes of the pandemic and the different responses adopted by governments, policy makers and activists. The new expressions of social action, and forms of solidarity and protest are discussed in detail, from the Black Lives Matters protests to the French Strike Movement and the Lebanese Uprising. This is a unique global commentary on the current crisis and the contemporary world.

3. NEW WEBSITE

A completely remodeled and modern new website is almost ready and will be available online soon. Among the novelties, there is a section dedicated to the RC47 memory, a dynamic interface with our digital platforms (Youtube, Facebook and Twitter), permanent update on our events and initiatives, as well as a blog with the reproduction of articles originally published in Open Movements and other short pieces.

4. MEMBERSHIP

RC47 has members, officially registered with ISA, in all regions of the world, forming a truly global community of social movements researchers. In the past two years, we have maintained the number of members, but we would like to expand them considerably over the next period. There are many advantages to being part of the RC47 research network, including access to discounts and fees exemptions on our activities and events. In order to allow more people to join us, mainly students and colleagues from the Global South, we plan at the next General Assembly to reduce membership fees as follows.
