

PROGRAMME RESEARCH

Trimestriel

Jan > March 2020

---

Editorial

As this year begins, the Research Cluster continues its many activities under the guiding principle of supporting innovative research that is open to society and meets the major challenges of our time. Among the many public events organized this trimester, four main themes take centre stage: racism and antisemitism; digital technology; ecological transition, and migration. Officially inaugurated last March, the International Platform on Racism and Antisemitism begins its work with the launch of its research seminar Racism and antisemitism: global, national and local perspectives.

At the same time, the Cluster is continuing to consolidate its multiple activities around “digital humanities” issues, which will now be structured within a Society(IES) and Digital Technology(IES) Research Platform. An official presentation of this new international platform will be held on March 5, paving the way for the pursuit of large-scale projects on these crucial issues in the social sciences and humanities.

The issue of ecological transition will also be central in discussions throughout the quarter. There will be a study day on ecological accounting (12 February), and an international colloquium on the thinking of Karl Polanyi which aims to foster dialogue between thinkers and actors working in environmental transition and those in the social economy (19-21 March).

The final thread of this programme, the issue of migration, will begin with the fourth Salon of Exile and Migration Literatures (LittExil) in partnership with the Palais de la Porte Dorée (15 February). It will continue with the participatory art exhibition “Human Mobility” by the Mexican artist Cristian Pineda (from 2 March), and a second day of reflection and debate on the notion of the migration crisis (18 March).

The FMSH wishes you an excellent year in 2020, rich in knowledge and intellectual nourishment.

Laëtitia Atlani-Duault,
FMSH Scientific Director

A close-up, blue-tinted photograph of a complex industrial machine, likely a steam engine or a similar mechanical system. The image shows various pipes, valves, and cylindrical components, all rendered in shades of blue. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the metallic surfaces and creating deep shadows. The overall composition is dense and detailed, focusing on the intricate parts of the machinery.

From the great transformation to the eco-social transition

4th EMES-Polanyi International Seminar

The challenge of the early XXI century is to formulate a new conception of transformation paving the way towards a society based on solidarity and epistemological justice. Bringing different fields of research the purpose of the 4th EMES-Polanyi International Seminar is to break through disciplinary boundaries and consider multiple epistemological perspectives on how economies are and can be (re-)embedded in their societal and political context, and to critically deliberate societal uncertainties that cast a shadow over democracies as well as emerging practices aimed at strengthening them.

The signs of luxury

Luxury in the age of globalisation Chair, Marc Abèles

This day-long seminar provides a comparative reflection on the systems of signs that characterize luxury, and on the strategies deployed by actors within the sector. The speakers will focus on contemporary signs of luxury, emphasizing the importance given to the affirmation of singularity that exalts the category of exclusiveness. The new language of luxury, in which ethics is a central theme, will also provide an angle for analysis.

Society(IES) and Digital Technology(IES) Research Platform Presentation

Ghislaine Azémard

The international Society(IES) and Digital Technology(IES) Platform will study emerging digital technologies (artificial intelligence and big data, blockchain, Internet of Things, cross-media, etc.) and the challenges of digital transformation in society. This will be done through national and international research, case studies, multi-stakeholder meetings, and theoretical and technical seminars. An additional objective is to unite citizens and raise awareness of the digital challenges they face.

The platform will bring together digital initiatives with high societal added value by connecting various projects and achievements of international partners: academics and researchers; companies and experts; civil society actors; digital authors and artists. Its projects and activities will be grouped around four axes: emerging media, societal issues and new subjectivities; e-mediation of access to knowledge; sustainable development of territories and citizenship; imagination and digital creation.

Racism and Anti-Semitism: global, national and local perspectives

International Platform on Racism and anti-Semitism, Philippe Portier and Michel Wiewiorka

This seminar intends to approach racism and anti-Semitism as a global, national and local phenomena, resulting from numerous metamorphoses and historical evolutions. The old forms of racism have not disappeared, but they are now in institutional and systemic mode, and in so-called “cultural” or “differentialist” form. Hatred and rejection of the other are now to be found on social networks (conspiracy theories, often anti-Semitic) and in algorithms. At a time of increase in identity-based movements and competition amongst victims, racist and anti-Semitic prejudice is even developing in some minorities or in groups defending minorities.

Alternatives and Remedies

Seminar Accumulations and accelerations, Christopher Pollmann

The capitalist organisation of human life and especially competition has progressively imposed a spiral of accumulation and acceleration which now threatens the survival of the species, ecologically, socially and psychologically. Based on this observation, established during the previous session of the Accumulation and Acceleration seminar, how can we escape global acceleration and artificialisation [urbanization? Industrialization?] of life?

Ecological and social accounting

Ecology, work, Employment Chair, D. Méda and F. Jany-Catrice

While national accounting has been the subject of much debate, corporate accounting has also come under scrutiny in recent times. Alternative accounting methods have been proposed, including by accounting experts, and some have been discussed within the FAIR network as part of this event. Such methods aim to account more accurately for the environment and for work, by valuing and/or amortising them. During this study day, proposals for the overhaul of corporate accounting will be explored.

Wednesday 02/12 | 10am - 5pm | FMSH Forum

“Migration crisis”? What crisis? II

Exil and migrations Chair, Alexis Nuselovici (NOUSS)

This workshop aims at examining the notion of “crisis” within the field of migration through an interdisciplinary dialogue. Through a common etymology, “crisis” and “criticism” share a same semantical value, that of an opportunity offered to new understandings and changes. In contrast, the current discursive use of “crisis” seems to stress historical ineluctability and political inflexibility. How to explain this reversal?

This study day extends the reflection of a first day which took place in October 2019. It is organized by A. Nuselovici (NOUSS) and N. Sahraoui.

Wednesday 18/03 | 9:30am - 6pm | FMSH BS1-28

Séminaire Violence et sortie de la violence

Plateforme Violence et sortie de la violence, J.-P. Dozon, Y. Le Bot and M. Wiewiorka

The 2020 programme is in line with this desire to open up and explore new, emerging fields of research, working at the crossroads of disciplines that are sometimes too little convened to grasp the processes of entry/non-entry/exit from violence.

It will open with a presentation and debate with Farhad Khosrokhavar on the new edition of his seminal book Radicalisation (published by MSH).

Will follow session devoted to the economics of violence online hate speech and its issues.

Humain Mobility Exhibition

Cristian Pineda

Human Mobility is a retrospective of the work of Mexican visual artist Cristian Pineda. Since 2006, the artist has been working around the subject of migration, which is why he has been travelling to the Mexican, American and European borders ever since. These borders are the testimony of a geographic, political, social, economic and cultural fracture, but what intrigues the artist the most is the roll of the human being in this both globalized and fracture world.

The FMSH will host a selection of Cristian Pineda's projects throughout the month of March. The exhibition will be accompanied by a series of conferences and workshops on the themes of migration.

Exile and Migration Literature Fair

Chair Exil et migrations, Alexis Nuselovici (NOUSS)

From the Ulysses of Homer to that of Joyce, the history of literature never ceases to tell the story of exile. To be safe and exist, today's migrants must also produce stories.

The LittExil fair welcomes independent authors, magazines and publishers for a day devoted to the theme of exile in contemporary literature.

This year, the show is part of the project "Inscriptions en relation: colonial traces with plural expressions" led by the Civic City association.

About

The Fondation Maison des sciences de l'homme (FMSH) is a institution that supports the development, influence and appeal of humanities and social sciences at a national and international scale. It creates excellent conditions for research and interdisciplinary dialogue, for nurturing scientific networks, and for cultivating fruitful encounters between the public and private sectors. Recognized as a public interest institution, the FMSH contributes to the renewal of research by developing its actions and services according to four priorities: cutting-edge research, international collaborations, innovative dissemination of knowledge and digital infrastructures.

This programme presents the events organized by the FMSH Research cluster. Structured around the Collège d'études mondiales, scientific platforms, chairs, innovative programmes and partnership projects, the Research cluster supports projects, studies and networks that take an interdisciplinary overview approach to major presentday challenges.
